THAT EXTRA ROOM

"Dining Corner" For Six People

"If only there were one more room, this house would be perfect!"

Alas and alack, that lament isn't at all uncommon, for a small house somehow seems to get smaller as the family gets bigger. Either we want a fourth or a fifth bedroom, or a den, workshop or boudoir, or just a kiddies' playroom. And it looks as though the only remedy is to move into a larger house.

A Practical Plan

But there's one alternative, especially if the sitting-room is moderately large. This is to cut out that separate dining-room and have a dining corner in the sitting-room, which thus becomes a fully fledged living-room.

This idea has such undoubted practical advantages that it is becoming quite popular wherever house-room is at a premium.

The way to set about it is to install a corner settee at one side of the sitting-room and to use with this a pedestal dining-table and three dining-chairs. The settee should measure 4ft. one way and 7ft. the other, with a depth from back to front of 18in. The table top should measure 6ft. by 2ft. 6in. It is then quite easy to accommodate six diners.

Then the room which was once the separate dining-room is set free for any other purpose dear to your heart—or the family's!

Moreover, it is very pleasant and convenient to be able to pass so easily to and fro between the sit-

TOO RIGOROUS SLIMMING

Entire Fruit Diet Dangerous

London, October 10.
In England, following the death of a young girl, Miss Chadwick, from the effects of rigorous slimming, doctors are taking steps to see that dangerous drugs are abandoned for safe slimming diets.

"The mistake Miss Chadwick made," Dr. J. Neil Leitch, probably our greatest authority on slimming, told me, "is that she tried an entire fruit diet. It is a tragic thing that more people do not know the action of food on the body."

"A fruit diet should be taken together with a carbohydrate food—such as bread. Here is the slimming diet I prescribe for really rigid slimming."

Breakfast. 2½ ozs. Bread and butter, apple and date salad.
Lunch. 5 ozs. whiting and sauce, 3½ ozs. potato, 2½ ozs. bread and butter, orange salad.
Dinner. 3 ozs. veal, 3 ozs. potatoes, 3 ozs. bread, ¾ ozs. spinach, 3 ozs. pears.

WOOLLEN JUMPERS

Jumpers are now more tailored than they were a few years ago, and it is important that not only they keep their shape but also that the beautiful effects of some of the wools are not spoiled. An expert of one of the most modern wool firms said that she never had her jumpers washed because no matter how carefully it is done, they always give a fraction of an inch somewhere, and part at least of the beauty and elasticity of the wool is lost. Although all good wools are guaranteed to wash, the little extra paid to have the garment cleaned is justified by the retention of its new appearance.

HOW TO TRAVEL LIGHTLY AND ECONOMICALLY

NEW WARDROBE TRUNKS

For Air Luggage

Not every woman has mastered the art of travelling comfortably, and a few notes on equipment recently put on the market may be useful.

Luggage becomes of primary importance when a long journey is to be undertaken. Whether you travel by air or by sea, weight is a factor that must always be considered, although it is naturally more important in the upper element.

The allowance of luggage per passenger for air luggage is 35 lb., and the tax imposed on extra weight makes it necessary to watch every ounce of packing and get the best out of it.

Fitted Luggage

Designers and manufacturers are being extraordinarily helpful these days. Real hide cases are, of course, out of the question by reason of their weight, but there is a new material called rawhide, which is just the thing. Admittedly, it is not cheap, but it does last indefinitely.

Alternatively there is vulcanised fibre, equally light and durable, and much less expensive. Fitted wardrobe cases, equipped with hangers for three or four suits or costumes make an excellent substitute for the cabin trunk, which is out of the question for air travel.

The hanging garments fit into one half of the case, while the other half is divided, by means of sliding boards, into compartments for shoes, toilet requisites, and so forth. The various compartments are covered by one thin flap lid, so that there is no possibility of anything being dislodged, no matter how the case is handled.

WELL TAILORED FROCKS

Worn With Fur Capes

Well-tailored black or brown coat-frocks are now worn with short or three-quarter fur capes, and there are long close-fitting woollen coats with full fur sleeves. With tailored coats and skirts, soft, short, and bright-coloured woollen scarves are worn, the ends are fringed. With flecked tweeds they look appropriate.

Shoes, gloves, and bags are carefully chosen. Pigskin is suggested for bags and gloves; reindeer has also its following. Soft suedes and kids are worn in the afternoon. The long pull-on glove may be roughly stitched with kid when made of suede, or finely stitched and pleated. For the evening there are Florentine boots embroidered "in-heads and pearls, braided, or incrustated."

"CALL OF THE WILD"—KING'S THEATRE

"Call of the Wild," 20th Century's colourful filmisation of Jack London's immortal story of the Yukon Gold Rush, comes to the King's Theatre next Sunday. A location unit headed by Clark Gable, Loretta Young and Jack Oakie faced danger and starvation in subzero Mount Maker, Washington, to film this Darryl Zanuck production.

In "Call of the Wild," Clark Gable and Jack Oakie are seen as Thornton and Shorty, two partners seeking gold in Alaska. They rescue beautiful Loretta Young from wolves and learn that her husband has been lost in the Arctic wastelands.

She possesses details regarding a rich "lost claim," and realising that she is helpless single-handed, the girl casts her lot with Gable and Oakie. After a perilous journey the trio locate the strike and find it unbelievably rich. Thornton and Loretta have fallen hopelessly in love when Gable's dog Buck finds the lost husband.

Others in the cast are Frank Conroy, Reginald Owen, Sidney Toler and Katherine de Mille.

"ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

America's navy, a fighting unit of which they are justly proud, has often been the background for pictures in the past—but now Paramount, in the endeavour to do for that service what they did for the army in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" have produced "Annapolis Farewell."

For those who do not fully appreciate the meaning of the title it should be explained that Annapolis is America's great naval training college.

The picture has romance, thrills and humour, but it is in thrills that the film abounds. Actual photographs of giant battleships in action, destroyers racing past submarines, diving and firing torpedoes, at the same time, while aeroplanes zoom overhead are the keynotes of the film.

The cast is headed by that famous British actor Sir Guy Standing, and Rosalind Keith, Tom Brown and Richard Cromwell are in support.

"THUNDER MOUNTAIN"—ALHAMBRA THEATRE

Zane Grey's newest and greatest story of rip-roaring outdoor adventure, "Thunder Mountain," brings George O'Brien back to the screen as a two-fisted, virile, fighting hero of the lawless west. Adapted from the new best-seller novel by the Homer of America's plains, "Thunder Mountain" is an engrossing story of the Idaho gold rush of a man who gambled on a woman's love and lost, but could not be downed.

Barbara Fritchie is the lovely but faithless beauty in this picture. An eastern girl, she encourages her father to stake O'Brien in his search for gold, hoping to share in his fortune.

O'Brien locates the gold in Thunder Mountain, a district long feared by the Indians. But when he returns to get Miss Fritchie and her father, Morgan Wallace, his rival, jump O'Brien's claim and kills his best friend.

Everyone turns against O'Brien except Frances Grant, a dance hall girl, who has secretly loved him all the while. She knows that Miss Fritchie has transferred her affection to Wallace and pleads with her to keep faith with O'Brien. A thrilling climax follows.

"THE LOVE HABIT"—STAR THEATRE

To press his suit with the beautiful lady with whom he falls deeply in love, Justin Abeland contrives to get engaged as valet to her husband, and is prepared to press his suit as well, in the hope that he may live under the same roof.

"This" situation, among many others of a highly compromising and delightful nature, arises in the "Love Habit," the brilliant comedy film which stars Seymour Hicks as the lovelorn Justin. His playful and irresistible down-making will bring entertainment of a new kind into theatres to the joy of all beholders.

A "NOVEL" CHARGE

MISTAKE GETS A YOUNG MAN INTO TROUBLE

Writes Suggestive Letters

SHE WANTED A BOOK NOT A LOVER

Philadelphia. In a book obtained from his circulating library, 30 year-old Lloyd Jackson found a visiting card belonging to a fashionable young woman, with the words "holiday husband wanted" written on the back.

Not to be outdone in romantic daring, Lloyd took the girl at her word and wrote her one or two letters, assuring her of his suitability for the post.

The young lady handed the letters over to the police and Lloyd soon found himself in court on a charge of writing improper letters. The judge placed him on probation for three years, gave him a suspended sentence of eighteen months and fined him $50.

All this may sound rather severe, but Lloyd should have guessed that the young lady did not really want a lover, but was merely memorising the name of a novel she wished to read—"Holiday Husband Wanted"—Reuter.

NEW POLICE CHIEF FOR NANKING

Nanking, Saturday. — Mr. Wang Ku-pan, the newly appointed Director of the Metropolitan Police Headquarters, is sailing for Shanghai from Amoy and is expected to arrive there on December 1, according to a message from Amoy. After two days' stay in Shanghai, he will come to Nanking on December 3 to assume his new duties. — Central News Agency.

"GOLD-DIGGERS OF 1935"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

With the golden-voiced Dick Powell in the leading role, supported by beautiful Gloria Stuart, "Gold-Diggers of 1935" is another musical triumph for Warner Brothers.

The new songs are: "The Words Are in My Heart," "I'm Going Shopping With You," and "The Lullaby of Broadway." Adolphe Menjou is the director who "puts on the show" and gives Dick his chance to sing, while Alice Brady is cast as Gloria's eccentric and disgustingly wealthy mother.

"OUR LITTLE GIRL"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

Shirley Temple, enthusiasts and their number is growing with each of her pictures—will flock to the Majestic Theatre to-night where she is appearing in one of her most delightful roles, in "Our Little Girl."

Unlike most of her other pictures Shirley does not indulge in dancing and singing. But her talent for acting is exploited in this picture as it has never been before. Talk and happiness Joel McCrea is "Daddy" in this picture.

Double Dummy Play

By Ely Culbertson

With all four hands exposed in what is known as double dummy play, many contracts may seem obvious to our readers and somewhat pointless. However, that is not the way declarer can visualize the holdings of the other three, and therefore every play is a problem, the solution of which must be reached through analysis of the adverse bidding and play.

The following deal was played in a duplicate game:

1—In responding to a takeout double, a four-card major suit is preferred to a longer or stronger minor suit.

2—Showing support.

3—South now shows a strong hand and a club suit.

4—North might bid four diamonds at this juncture, but for what purpose? South holds at least nine cards in hearts and clubs. He wants North to confirm the club suit. North risks letting the bidding die at five clubs, and in match-point play four hearts would probably be a more profitable contract. If South is looking for a slam, the risk is worth taking.

5—South indicates slam intentions. If North holds the spade Ace, rather than the diamond Ace, the grand slam might be possible.

6—Fixing the contract. North avoids slam at hearts, fearing South's hearts are not strong enough to stand spade ruffs by North with heart honours.

The club slam is, of course, a laydown. The natural lead is the spade King, which holds, and declarer can make the next twelve tricks against any defence, taking first, third, fourth, hearts and a diamond and ruffing two spades in the dummy.

A very interesting problem of play arises at home table. South played a contract of five hearts. West opened the spade King and followed with another spade. The question was: can South make his contract?

The contract can be made at double dummy. North must ruff the second spade with the Jack of trump.

REFINED FISH

WANTED FOR LAKE IN ANDES

Must Like Cold Weather

FISHING DIFFICULTIES ON LAKE TITICACA

Santiago, Chile.—There are fish in Lake Titicaca, the highest in the world, but not enough.

Besides, they are of a coarse, native variety, and the large number of natives who live on the lake's shores, would like more refined fish, although the water is said to be too cold for most European varieties.

The Bolivian and Peruvian Governments have therefore signed a "formal diplomatic agreement" whose object is to create a fishing industry on this sheet of water set in the Andes 12,000 feet above sea level and 5,000 square miles in area, and re-stock it.

It is confidentially expected that foreign experts will find some species of fish that will be able to bear the intense cold, even though the natives, who from time immemorial have fished from frail boats made of reeds, refrain from learning to swim because they cannot stand the cold themselves.—Reuter.

POLICE OUTCLASSED BY SOUTH CHINA "A" IN SOCCER DUEL

David Leonard, above, the tireless St. Joseph's leader, gave another very fine display against the East Lancs. yesterday in the First Division.

WHAT WILL BECOME OF HO KAR KEUNG? FUSILIER TEAMS BOTH EXTENDED

KOWLOON MUST RECTIFY GRAVE BLUNDER

There was one very disappointed man in Saturday's local soccer programme. Ho Kar-keung, who asked for a transfer to South China because he said he could not get on with his Athletic teammates. On Saturday he did not exactly fit in with South China!

The Lincolns swamped the Saints juniors in the Third Division on Saturday and goals came with a "Rush," who was responsible for two.

The Select Few!

Willerton and Clarke, of the Police and combined R.A.O.C. and R.A.S.C. Third and Second division teams, have respectively, joined that band of select few who have scored more than one above a "hat-trick." The former netted four against the Railway, while the latter scored five against the Kowloon juniors.

Coakley, who was promoted from the Fusiliers' Second Division team last Saturday, fully deserved this special honour by his contribution towards their success against Kowloon, a powerful drive resulting in Boys saving only for another Fusilier to score the only goal of the match from the rebound.

Thrilling Display

The Second Division clash between the Fusiliers and the Lincolns on Saturday was most thrilling from start to finish, both teams having an equal share of the play.

Bumster and Dennis, two live-wires in the Fusilier attack, gave the Lincoln defence a gruelling first half and it was only by the skin of their teeth that the Lincolns escaped a bigger trouncing.

Backs-To-The-Wall

The second half, however, saw a complete change come over the Lincolns and it was now the turn of the Fusiliers to fight with "their backs to the wall."

Toyne, who is a fine all-rounder and an excellent hockey forward, repaid Bumster's efforts of the first half in full and never gave the Welsh defenders a moment's relaxation.

Two Good Defenders

Had it not been for Gidley, the Fusilier back, and Saunders, their custodian, a different tale might have been written after the conclusion of the second half.

Although the Fusilier seniors had things very much their own way last Saturday against Kowloon during the second half, their defence by no means had as easy passage in the preceding one.

ALEC PEARCE TOO GOOD FOR NAVY HAYWARD DEPUTISES FOR DUNKLEY

GOODWIN'S FINE BOWLING

(By L.B.W.)

THANKS to a fine piece of bowling by Alec Pearce, who took 6 wickets for 9 runs, coupled with an excellent innings by E. R. Duckitt (51 not out), the Hong Kong Cricket Club beat the Royal Navy in their senior league cricket match by 9 wickets at King's Park on Saturday.

The Navy were very disappointing, none of their batsmen, with the exception of Lt. Holland-Martin, appearing to be seeing the ball at all. Lt. Branwell made 22 runs, but his innings was a very poor one as he was not judging the ball at all well. Alec Pearce was indeed the hero of the match. Keeping an immaculate length throughout his 7-2 overs, he had the Navy batsmen hopelessly tied up and had it not been for a somewhat lucky four, his analysis would have been 6 for 5!

Winning the toss, Pay. Comdr. Hargreaves elected to bat, and as G. S. Dunkley was late, Tom Hayward kept wicket for the Club, performing exceptionally well. He "held the fort" till about 3.15 p.m. when Dunkley arrived and took over from his skipper.

Enr. Comdr. Davis and A. B. Peatfield opened the Navy innings, but they did not impress against the bowling of Redmond (Pavilion end) and P. C. Frost, though Davis brought off two pretty shots on the leg side. He was, however, inclined to be over cautious and lost his wicket (clean bowled) when playing back to Redmond.

After he had lost his partner, Peatfield shaped better, making one particularly nice late cut, but very shortly after a beauty from Redmond took his middle peg.

Lt. Branwell started with a very pretty single, but that was about all that was impressive about his knock. He did not seem to be seeing the ball at all and as a result became careless and missed several easy shots. Holland-Martin's fine knock I have never seen Lt. Holland-Martin bat so well as he did on Saturday. He was timing them beautifully and each hit was made in the middle of the bat. Though he made only 21, his innings was worth infinitely more than that.

It was at this stage that Hayward introduced Pearce into the attack in place of Frost, and the slow bowler at once began to worry the batsmen. Branwell was very shaky against him and from the Pavilion it appeared as though the ball which bowled him came straight through without taking the spin which Pearce had apparently put on.

The scoring was painfully slow at this stage and Lt. Frowse was sent out with instructions to liven things up, which he did—he opened his score with a lucky snick through the slips to the boundary!

In the meantime Pearce accepted a very hot return from Lt. Davies, diving full length to secure the ball but he turned round immediately to tell the umpire that it was not a catch. He had evidently let the ball touch the ground just as he got to it, though the batsman was already retracing his steps to the pavilion! However, this did not make any great difference as he was out to the same bowler, caught and bowled, a few balls later.

FRIENDLY CRICKET

Drawn Match At Happy Valley

In a friendly cricket match, at Happy Valley yesterday, the Graduates Association drew with the Craigengower Cricket Club. C.C.C. 112 (A. B. Hanson 51, P. Hipkiss 4 for 40). Graduates 115 for 7 wickets (D. King 51, W. Taylor 4 for 21).

Bad Passing

The East Lancs. forwards would have done better to have kept the ball on the ground instead of wasting valuable time with high kicking, which accomplished nothing.

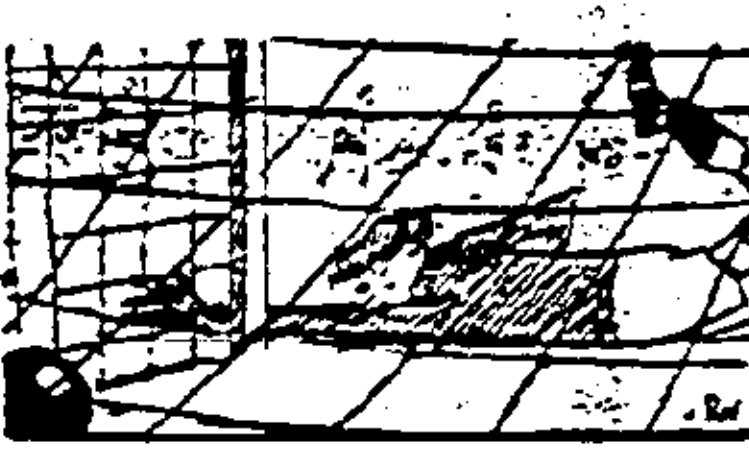

Sellick, the Engineers' goal-keeper, was kept very busy on occasion, being called upon to save many dangerous shots from Horner and Griffin.

Lee Wai-tong, China's soccer idol above, gave South China "A" the necessary stimulus yesterday for them to emerge triumphant in their First Division clash against the Police.

EUROPEANS FAIL IN FRONT OF GOAL CHAMPIONS SEEN AT THEIR BEST

LEE WAI TONG INSPIRES TEAM

(By "Rover")

SOUTH China "A" firmly established their superiority at Caroline Hill yesterday when, in their Premier League clash with the Police, they took both points with comparative ease, scoring four goals to one by their opponents.

The ground was almost capacity-filled, and onlookers were treated to a fine exhibition of fast and exciting football in which the skill and speed of the Chinese completely outclassed the slow methods of the Police.

South China's defence was a feature of splendid team-work. Close marking by the halves, prompt and deadly tackling, and powerful first-time clearances gave the Police forwards few chances of scoring. At all times there was complete understanding between halves and rearguard.

The coolness of Lee Wai-tong, the spectacular double-kicking and headwork of Tam, the speed with which the wing-halves fell back at the slightest sign of danger—all these were incidents in defensive tactics that had the Police attack nonplussed from start to finish.

Tao In Limelight

In attack South China touched their best form. Able led by Lee Wai-tong, the line worked smoothly and well. Ip Pak-wah was a trifle behind the others in positioning, and Tao had little to do until the second-half, when he suddenly flashed into the limelight with a brilliant goal and was responsible for many other dangerous moments.

Lee was given an unusual amount of room by Gough and took full advantage of it, though even he found it none too easy to pass Blackburn and Chris Fie. Fung was prominent in his exploitation of the ball, and created many good openings with judicious passes. All round, South China gave a fine display, and were never really extended by the reorganised Police side.

ATHLETIC JUNIORS TROUNCED MUCH IMPROVED NAVAL SIDE

CHEUNG MOON WING SCORES TWICE

A strengthened Navy second string had matters practically all their own way at Causeway Bay yesterday, when they easily accounted for the Chinese Athletic in their Second Division soccer encounter by 3 goals to 2.

The winners of the game were the Navy half-backs. They were very sound and the ball very seldom evaded them, and their passes to the forward line were always accurate and well directed. As a result, the Navy forwards were shooting in for the best part of the game, and Lo, and Lo, the Athletic defenders, must be congratulated on their cool play, which enabled them to save the situation on many dangerous occasions.

Clever Leader

McLeod played a good game in the centre, but, unlike most centre-forwards, he did not seem to be out for a bag of goals; he kept his feet, and his style of play caught Lee Wai-tong on three occasions when, expecting McLeod to shoot, he caught him and allowed another forward to shoot into an unguarded portion of the net.

The Athletic were unfortunate in the first few minutes when Lo, handled in the area, could look the spot kick for the Navy and open the scoring.

Ip Pak-wah, above, gave a pleasing performance against the Police yesterday and played a large part in South China "A's" brilliant victory.

ATHLETIC SURPRISE THE NAVY

SAILORS BEATEN BY ODD GOAL BUT DRAW WOULD HAVE BEEN FAIRER RESULT

Contrary to expectations, the Athletic were not only able to hold the Navy in their First Division encounter at Causeway Bay yesterday, but won by the odd goal in three!

The game was a fast and thrilling one, and the result was a matter for conjecture right to the final whistle, but the Navy have only themselves to blame that they were unable to win, or, at least, to force a draw.

They had countless opportunities, but had finishing by the forwards spoiled excellent work. On the run of play a draw would have been a fairer result.

Not Yet Settled

The Navy have a good side, but they have not yet settled down to each other's play, which was quite evident yesterday.

The best man in the side was Roberts, who played a great game between the sticks; he saved marvellous shots, and is easily on a par with the Colony's best goal-keepers.

Both the backs were good and cleared well, especially Crawford, whose clearances reached far down the field. Bowers was again prominent in the intermediate line, playing a good, unfettered game, and more goals should have been scored from the movements he initiated.

Wearmouth Brilliant

Wearmouth played a very fast game on the left wing and, considering his speed, his ball control and accurate centres were brilliant.

The best man in the Athletic's side was Chan Man-chi. He made most of the openings and scored the first goal of the game.

ST. JOSEPH'S CLOSE WIN OVER THE EAST LANCES

The big fault among the East Lances' forwards was a tendency to hang back instead of running up with the ball, for their long shooting was good, and would have been more fruitful from close quarters.

The Saints appeared unable to get away with the ball, the forwards lacking combination. One or two shots from Leonard, their centre-forward, went near the mark, but were cleared confidently by Harmsworth.

Following midfield exchanges, Ridings scored with a fine shot from 20 yards out.

Leonard Equalises

After five minutes play on the resumption Leonard equalised for the Saints, Harmsworth stepping out too far for safety.

The Saints' intermediate line during this half showed a definite improvement, Sinclair working very hard, combining good feeding with judicious defence work. Combination throughout the team was much better.

Victor and Hussain, the Saints' right-way, worked in perfect harmony.

After working hard for an opening, Hussain gave the Saints the lead with an excellent goal from close quarters.

East Lances—Harmsworth; Swai and Steel; Smith, Lawton and Eckersley; Mather, Gorman, Sandford, Ridings and Ratcliffe.
St. Joseph's—U. Souza; L. Souza and V. Costa; Woo, Sinclair and Elms; Victor, Hussain, Leonard, Joannilho and Sprinkle.

EUROPEANS FAIL IN FRONT OF GOAL

North's Debut

North's first game was a distinct success, and until Parker dropped back, he was their best half. Gough has played much better, and was too far up the field most of the time. McHardy brought off many daring saves, clearing difficult shots with apparent ease, while Blackburn and Chris Pile worked like Trojans in a defence, almost always under severe pressure.

In attack, however, the Police showed up badly. Green was sadly out of position as leader. He had no bustle, and displayed little speed or initiative. Tommy Pile was the best forward on view, and being well supplied with useful passes, he sent over countless centres that should have been made more use of. Moss had few chances, but spoilt those he had by rather selfishly shooting from awkward angles instead of passing to a better positioned player.

Fine Opening Goal

The game opened slowly, but after seven minutes South China took the lead through Lee Wai-tong. Fung lobbed the ball forward for the centre-forward to dash past the backs and place it well out of McHardy's reach.

South China continued to press after this early success, and held sway until the interval, when they crossed over leading by a solitary goal.

Brooks, who went off shortly before the interval, resumed at outside-left, Parker dropping back to left-half, with Moss inside-left.

A promising attack initiated by Gough looked hopeful, and Tommy Pile's accurate centre caused a scramble in the Chinese goalmouth, but the hesitancy of the inside men lost them a good chance of equalising, and the ball was cleared to the other end.

Glorious Goal

A loose ball attracted Lee Wai-tong, and before the Police realised their danger he was through and had crashed the ball past McHardy from 15 yards with a glorious left-footed drive.

The Police attacked desperately after this second reverse, and during a melee just inside the penalty area, were awarded a penalty for hands against Lee Kwok-wai. Moss easily converted, with a powerful shot.

Within equalising distance again, the Police tried hard for a further goal, and Moss was presented with a fine chance, but ran too far down before shooting.

Goal Disallowed

A centre by Tso and a shot by Ip Pak-wah which struck the underside of the bar before entering the net looked a goal, but the referee consulted a linesman and disallowed South China's appeal.

With South China dominating the exchanges, Fung secured from a corner kick and quickly sent out to Tao Kwai-shing, who dashed past Parker at top speed and beat McHardy with a left-footed drive from 5 yards.

Following a sound effort by Parker, whose shot went inches over the bar, Tay received and covered much ground before passing in to Fung King-cheung, who, unmarked, made no mistake.
S. Chin, J. W. Wong Wing, Leo Wing and Tan Kong-pak, Leung Wing-chi, Wong Mee-shun and Lee Kwok-wai; Tao Kwai-shing, Fung King-cheung, Tso Wai-tong, Ip Pak-wah and Tay Ques-hang.
Parker, McHardy, Blackburn and C. Pile, Brooks, Gough and North; T. Pile, Stephens, Green, Parker and Moss.

G. FOWLER IN SCORING MOOD FOR C.B.A. HOCKEY TEAM

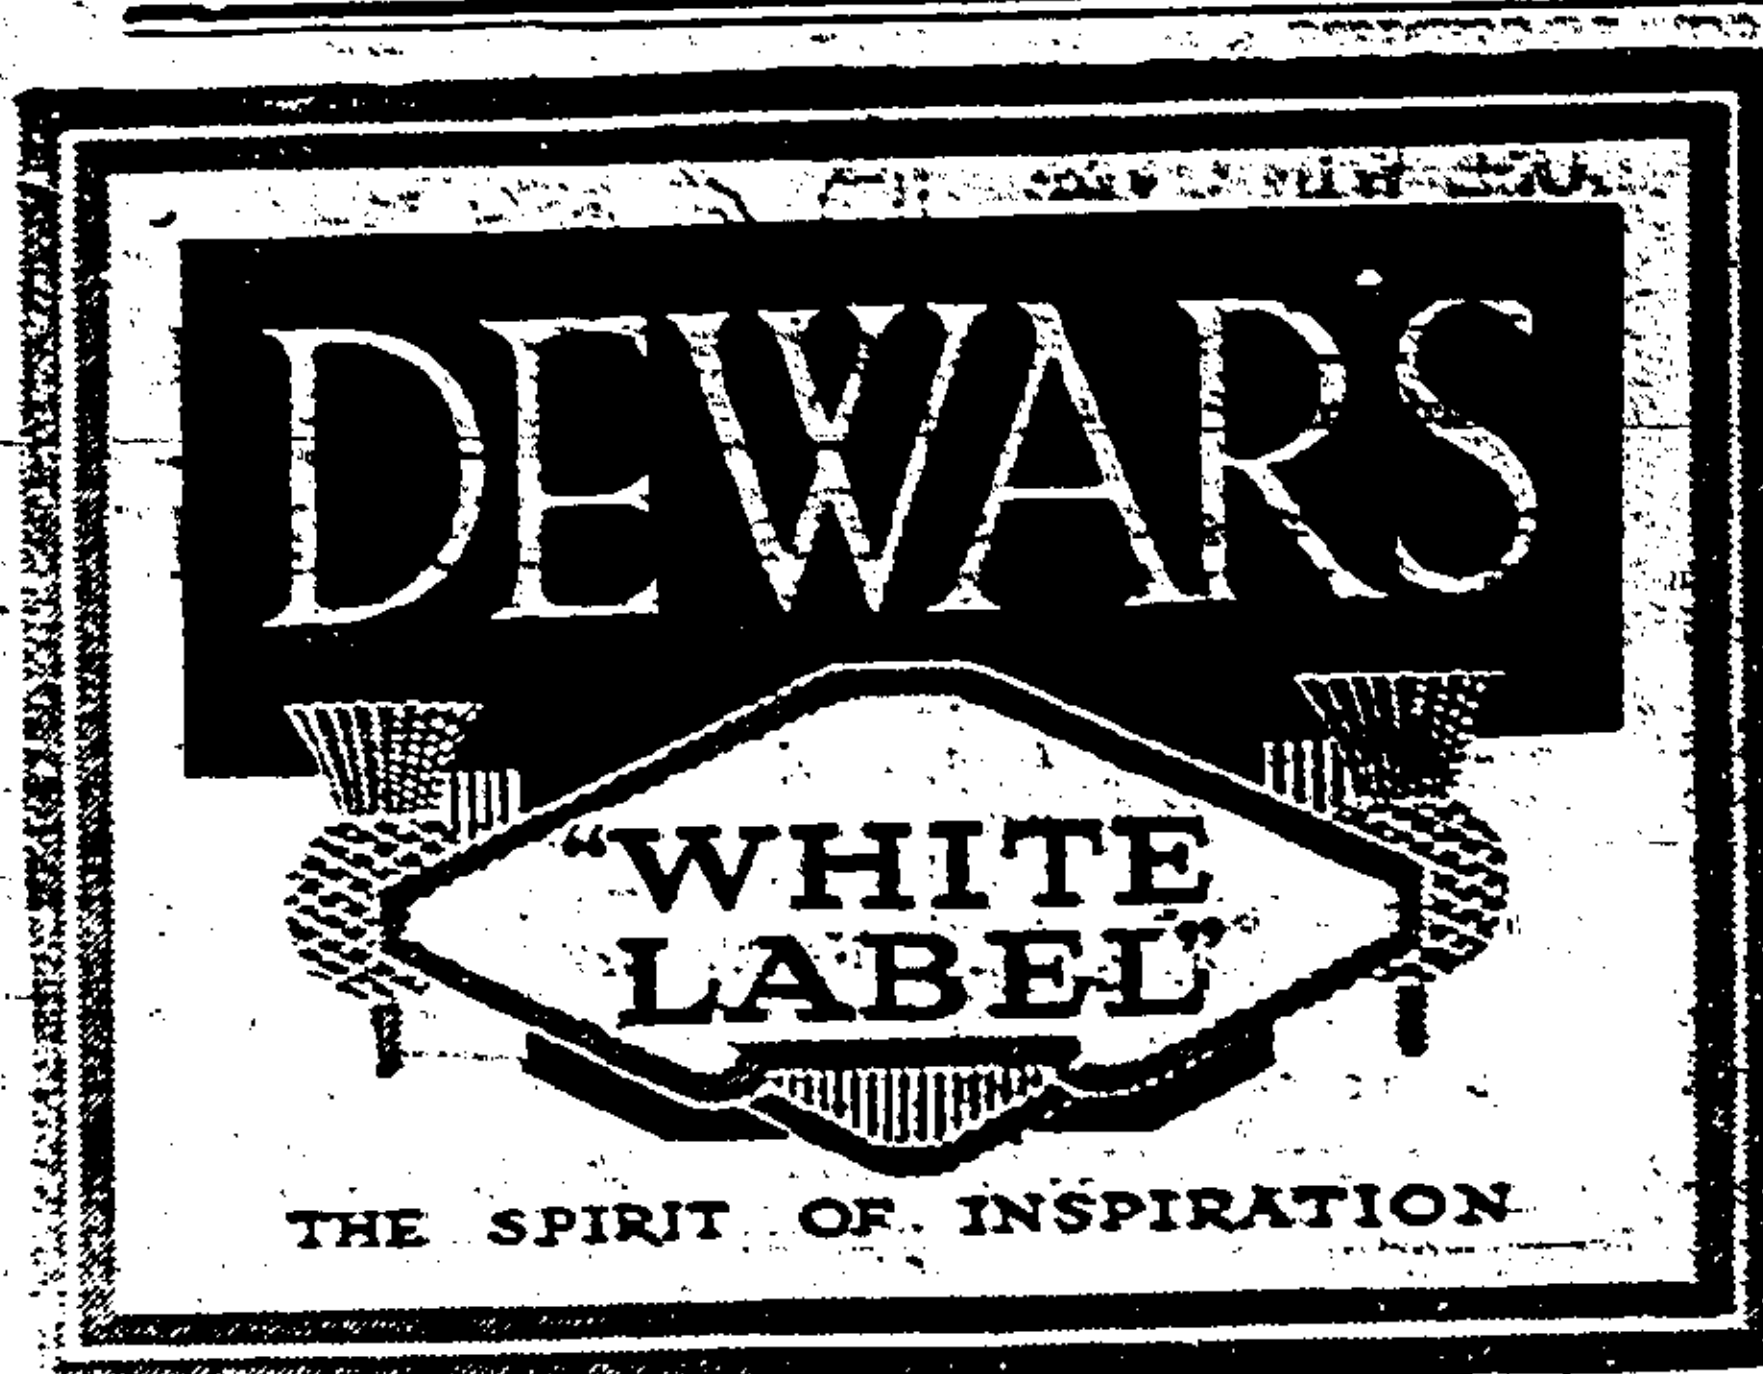

G. Fowler, who scored four goals for the C.B.A. "B" team, was largely responsible for their 6-3 win over the 12th Battery, R.A. In a Junior Mamak hockey encounter at King's Park yesterday, G. Fowler and Rickford were the others scores for the winners, while Larry, (C) and Williams, scored for the Artillery.

Shameless Election Propaganda

At Nomination Day before the recent election, thirty-eight fortunate nominees, including the Prime Minister and Mr. Runciman, were returned unopposed. The remaining 1,308 candidates had nine clear days before Polling Day in which to lay their views before the electors in the most persuasive and attractive guise. But they were not always presented within the framework of the truth. The Socialists found this very difficult—if indeed they were trying—and Sir Samuel Hoare was moved to complain at Chelsea of the "electioneering misrepresentations" which continued to be spread abroad "in spite of the most categorical contradiction." One of them was that the Government are planning to reform the League and return to the system of separate alliances. There is, of course, "not a word of truth in it," and it is difficult to understand how anyone could expect such a clumsy falsehood to find credence in view of the Foreign Secretary's recent speeches and those of the Prime Minister. But the Socialists, backed by the great War Lie, which was to have seen them through the Election, were furious to find themselves on Gumpowder Plot Day without a recognisable Guy.

The First Lord of the Admiralty in the last Socialist Government denounced Mr. Baldwin for his reference to "the alleged obsolescence" of British ships, and declared the British Fleet to be "the largest, most powerful and most efficient in the world." Sir Stafford Cripps also committed "himself to the astonishing statement that since the war, no other country has built any battleships at all," while Britain has completed three. Consider what Sir Stafford had forgotten or omitted. The United States has laid down and completed since the war two battleships, the West Virginia and the Colorado, each of 32,600 tons. Italy has laid down, but not yet completed, two battleships of 35,000 tons; France has launched one of 26,500 tons, and a sister ship is well on the way. Two more of 35,000 tons are being laid down. Germany has completed two "pocket battleships" of 10,000 tons, and has also laid down three others. Was Sir Stafford Cripps aware or unaware of these facts when he charged Mr. Baldwin with prevarication? Mr. Alexander's statement that the British Fleet is "stronger and more modern than any in the world" was equally shameless. Great Britain has completed or laid down 32 cruisers of all sizes, many small, since the war. Japan has laid down 31 United States 37. But the aggregate United States tonnage is much greater than the British; it will be twice as great when its vast naval programmes are completed.

In post-war destroyers Great Britain now ranks fourth; in post-war submarines fourth or fifth. Japan will have modernised the whole of her fleet by 1937. The supremely dangerous element in the British situation is that so many of our ships in all classes are already over age, while others are fast reaching the limit of their life at sea. That is why Mr. Baldwin so strongly emphasised the "war replacement." Nor were Socialist misstatements confined to the Navy. Mr. Bromley, the railwayman's leader, tried to

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

ANNE OF BRITANNY

Anne of Brittany (1477-1514) married Emperor Maximilian of Germany by proxy on December 16, 1489. But she never saw either her husband or the country of which she thus became the Empress. Her French subjects threatened rebellion. To avoid any outbreaks, she decided to marry a French King. Never troubling to divorce her German husband, she married a second time, selecting King Charles VIII of France as her husband in 1491. Charles died in 1498, and Anne became engaged to marry Louis XII of France, a marriage which was never concluded.

METHODIST CHURCH WEDDING

Doctor From Yunnan
And London Bride

Miss Bertha Iris Lester, who arrived from Brockley, London, on Thursday, and Dr. Tom George Newcastle-Woods, M.R.C.S. (England), L.R.C.P. (London), of Yunnan, were married at the English Methodist Church, Wanchai, on Saturday afternoon.

The Rev. E. Dewstoe, Rev. A. H. Bray and Rev. E. C. H. Tribbeck officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by the Hon. Mr. Edwin Taylor, wore a lovely ivory silk marocain gown set off with a Brussels lace veil held in place by a floral coronet. She wore an old silver clasp on the neckline of the gown, and carried a sheaf of tube roses with asparagus fern.

Miss Mary Taylor, the only bridesmaid, wore a turquoise blue silk marocain dress with silver headdress and silver shoes. She carried a sheaf of lemon shaded gladioli.

Mrs. E. Lloyd-Jones was Matron of Honour and Dr. S. H. Moore was best man. Mr. E. C. Randall was at the organ.

A reception was later held at the Gloucester Hotel.

scare the Arwick electors with the threat of conscription. His information, he said, and he believed it correct, was that if the National Government got back with a good majority they would introduce the thin end of the wedge of conscription. His "information" it was not even coffee-house gossip. The Manchester area seemed to be considered especially favourable soil for these reports. But they were well kept for the National Government's benefit on November 14.

Here There and Everywhere

GUY'S MEDICAL SCHOOL

Sir Kingsley Wood, the Minister of Health, presented the prizes for the past year to the students of Guy's Hospital Medical School recently.

Up to 1825 Guy's students used the same classes as those of St. Thomas's Hospital. Among them, from 1815 to 1817, was John Keats.

Guy's Hospital itself, which was opened with 50 patients, in January, 1725, was built on the proceeds of publishing and stock-jobbing.

The founder, Thomas Guy, after making a fortune as a printer and publisher, more than doubled his money by successful speculation in the South Sea Company.

He sold out before the "bubble" burst, and when he died he left the balance of his estate, over £220,000, to the Hospital.

Largely because of his generosity Guy's, alone of all the big medical schools in London, has been maintained without Government help.

OLDEST RUGBY CLUB

Guy's can also claim—and with considerable justification—that theirs is the oldest Rugby football club in existence, with the exception of Rugby School.

This honour is usually attributed to Blackheath, which was founded in 1862, but according to the files of the Sportsman, the successor to the old Bell's Life, Guy's were playing Rugby matches in 1843-4.

Guy's were one of the original members of the Rugby Union, which was formed in 1871. They were also the first winners of the Inter-Hospitals Cup when the competition was inaugurated in 1875.

Topping It Off

"Have you seen my dog, Fido, this morning, Mr. Barker?"

ASTRONOMY AS A HOBBY

AMAZING WONDERS IN THE HEAVENS

INTERESTING HOBBY FOR THOSE WITH QUIET TASTES

(By Will Hay)

In these hurry-scurry days there is nothing so essential to the busy man as some kind of hobby that will take his mind from the cares and worries of business, and, in my opinion, there is no hobby which attains that end so well as does astronomy.

When you reach out into the abyssal depths of space, and deal with a universe of inconceivable size, it opens up a new sphere so replete with interest as to make one forget such insignificant things as human affairs.

Astronomy, fortunately, is not an expensive hobby; a small or moderately-sized telescope is the only outlay—the stars are free to all.

Second-hand telescopes—both refractors and reflectors—can be bought quite cheaply, or, if one is of a mechanical turn of mind, the making of a reflector is a fairly simple and interesting job of work.

Having acquired our telescope, what shall we look at?

Moon Craters

Well, there is plenty from which to choose. We could first examine our nearest neighbour in space—the moon. This small world—it is only a little over 2,000 miles in diameter—takes 29 days to travel round the earth once—at an average distance of 239,000 miles.

And what does it look like through a telescope?

We see a brightly lit globe covered with craters like shell-holes on a battlefield; in fact it appears as though it had suffered a heavy bombardment.

Many astronomers believe that that is exactly what did occur at some early time—only, instead of shells, the projectiles were "meteorites."

The dark areas we see with the naked eye, and which form the face of the "Man in the Moon," are comparatively smooth areas that escaped the bombardment.

"Occultations"

In addition there are ranges of high mountains, numerous cracks or fissures, and many other interesting features, all of which provide an endless subject for study with even a small telescope. It is interesting, too, to notice the moon's passage round the earth, which can be easily detected by watching the moon pass in front of the stars.

These "occultations" are of value in proving that the moon has no appreciable atmosphere, for as we watch the moon's limb creep up to the star we are surprised to notice that the star vanishes suddenly. If the moon had an atmosphere of any density the light from the star would diminish gradually as we viewed it through the moon's atmosphere.

Meet Venus

Timing these occultations is also a useful piece of work for an amateur, as they are of great value in determining the path of the moon round the earth.

Reaching farther out into space we can examine, in turn, the other worlds that make up the solar system. We can see the phases of Venus and Mercury as they revolve round the sun between the earth and our luminary, for both present those phases which are a familiar aspect of the moon.

Mars, being a small world—and a long way off—needs a large telescope to reveal its finer detail, but a small telescope will show the snowcaps round its poles, and some of its broader markings.

The ruddy colour of Mars will be at once apparent, contrasting sharply with the white snow or ice caps.

THE "OLD LADY"

MAURETANIA REBORN IN NEW GUISE

New York Hotel And Modern Flats

ALL SHIP'S BEST INTERIOR FEATURES REBUILT

The ghost of the Mauretania, a mere shell of the "Old Lady," lies in a breakers yard at Rosyth. The greater part of the ship, stripped of hull, engines and funnels, has been rebuilt inside a vast shed at Southampton Old Docks, ready for transhipment to New York. The recreated Mauretania is to become an hotel. Here is the story, told by Mr. Walter Martin, to whom this live "ghost" now belongs:

"As the Chairman of a company owning an hotel in Guernsey, I happened to be looking this summer for some furniture and fittings. I visited the Mauretania with the intention of making a few bids.

Her Famous Rooms

"Once I started to prow around the decks, however, I was utterly carried away by the grandeur of the ship. So I bought everything I could lay my hands on."

"Everything," one may add, comprises thirty of the famous "millionaires' suites," the walnut smoke-room, the weathered oak dining saloon, the South African mahogany lounge, the maple-wood drawing-room, the tourist lounge and dining saloon, the best cabins, and all the ship's navigation instruments, even down to her exact lettering on fore and stern.

Such items as Mr. Martin failed to purchase at the auction he has since acquired by writing to the various owners and offering them sums 25 per cent. in excess of their original bids.

"For more than 20 years the Mauretania proved that Britain did rule the waves in the Mercantile Marine, in the same way as H.M.S. Victory had done for the Navy," said Mr. Martin.

"I thank God for giving me the inspiration to save the 'innards' of the ship, instead of allowing them to be disintegrated and sold as firewood."

England in New York

Mr. Martin, who is chairman of Martin's, Ltd., the cigar firm in Piccadilly, but who prefers to lead the life of a fisherman in Guernsey, has formed a syndicate, and architects' plans have been drawn up which will involve:

The building of a Mauretania Hotel in New York, of which the ship's public rooms and regal suites will form the "core," on the ground floor; and

A Mauretania block of 200 modern flats in St. Peter Port, Guernsey, equipped with the ship's furniture.

"We want the hotel to be an English institution in the heart of New York," Mr. Martin said.

"The sign outside will be 'The Mauretania's own lettering.' In the foyer will stand her own binnacles and other instruments. Guests will be able to dine and dance in her own rooms. She will be a ship on shore."

"By means of continual heating in the sheds we have been able to prevent the priceless panelling from warping, while the dome from the first-class lounge, which alone cost £7,000 when the ship was built in 1907, has suffered in no way."

So the Mauretania's "ghost" has one more Atlantic trip to make.

SUSPENDED SENTENCES IN IRELAND

Why Irish Criminals Go To England

THREE YEARS' ABSENCE EXPUNGES PENALTY

The practice of the Irish Courts in imposing ineffective sentences on prisoners was recently commented on by Mr. J. B. Sandbach, K.C., the Marlborough Street magistrate.

Before the Court was John Walsh, aged 42, who was found guilty of being a suspected person, loitering in the West End to steal from unattended motor-cars.

The police said that Walsh was under a sentence of 18 months' imprisonment in Ireland, but so long as he kept out of Ireland for three years he need not serve it.

NO POLITICAL BROADCASTS IN NEW-ZEALAND

Government And Opposition Leaders Decline Facilities

Wellington (N.Z.).

Leaders of the Government and Opposition parties have declined the offer of the Broadcasting Board to transmit their election speeches over the wireless.

This means that no candidates will be permitted to broadcast.

"It is most iniquitous," said the magistrate, "that the Irish Courts pass these heavy sentences on you and men like you and make them of no effect if you keep out of the country. Then you come over here and proceed with your criminal activities. So far as I can see there is no method of retaliation. I wish I could make an order to send you back to Ireland, but I cannot do that."

Walsh was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL FOUNDER'S DAY

Annual Dinner Held In London

The annual Founder's Day dinner of Christ's Hospital, celebrating the 383rd anniversary of the school, was held at the Trocadero Restaurant last month. Sir Charles Hignett occupied the chair.

In proposing the toast of the School the Chairman said that the Christ's Hospital Club had "grown its present quarters, and it sufficient financial support to enable them to be able to do larger, premises and provide increased facilities for Old Blues and youngsters who had just left school."

HAUNTING FEARS

TERROR OF JAPANESE VENGEANCE

Professor From East Dies In London

FATE OF WIFE UNKNOWN UP TO THE END

Day and night for the past two years, Prof. Timothy O'Conroy had been haunted by fearing that a Japanese secret society would wreak vengeance on his wife and himself.

Professor O'Conroy died recently in London.

His wife was not with him. She is still in Japan, her fate unknown. Two years ago he said: "I am afraid they will kill her. Japanese secret societies are cruel."

"Very Lovely"

He had then just returned from Tokyo. This was his story.

"I went to Japan as Professor of English at Keio University, Tokyo.

"While there I met my wife. She belonged to an aristocratic Japanese family, and was very lovely.

"I fell in love with her, and she promised to help me with a book I was writing.

"She knew she was risking her life in helping me to unearth information for my book, which was to be called 'The Menace of Japan.'

"Immediately 'The Dragons,' a notorious secret society, heard of my work, the persecution started.

"I was warned. My wife was warned. My house was burgled six times, and eventually I had to flee the country.

"I am now trying to raise enough money to bring my wife here."

His Sacrifice

He sacrificed his health in this endeavour.

Last June he went to Hampstead General Hospital as a patient. There he died, aged 52.

"Only once he spoke of his wife," a Pressman was told at the hospital. "From his remarks it was believed that he feared she might be in prison in Japan."

Professor O'Conroy was born in Cork. After serving in the Navy, he worked in a Bloomsbury hotel. Then he taught English at a Copenhagen school.

After that, he held a post at the Russian Court, where he met Rasputin and Tolstoy.

When the revolution came, he escaped to Japan.

CZECH MINISTERS TAX THEMSELVES

To Aid Civil Aviation

Prague.

Every member of the Czechoslovak Cabinet is to pay a special "tax" out of his own pocket, to help aviation.

This has been decided upon at a meeting of Ministers at Prague, at which the "Thousand Pilots Fund" was discussed.

The fund has been started "for the promotion of civil aviation" and the immediate object to train a thousand new pilots. They would be reserves available for the defence of the Republic.

Each Cabinet Minister is to contribute a thousand crowns (about £5) to the fund.—Reuter.

To-day's Short Story

MAJOR COLE'S THIRD SHOT

By Nigel Balchin

ONE of the most characteristic, and perhaps one of the most charming features of the game of golf, is the old-established partnership. Week after week, month after month, year after year, the same single or the same four-ball match can be seen setting out, each member, knowing to a hair the abilities, the strengths and the weaknesses of the opposition, and intent on repeating the narrow victory, or avenging the defeat of last Saturday.

Bill Carter and I are one of these old-established couples. Goodness knows how many matches we have played over the last ten years. There isn't a pin between us, and it is a rare day when one of us can gain a victory by more than two and one. Both of us play off ten, and I suppose it is too much to hope that we shall ever get game, and, if I hit farther than Bill, he makes up for it by being a demon at the short game, and by being less liable to wander disastrously into the "tiger country" in which the Royal North Lark links abound.

At the time of which I write we had not long been members of the Royal North Lark, having migrated there together when our old battle-ground at Foreham was bought up by speculative builders and turned into a housing estate. But the change of course made no difference to our equality.

clump of trees which hides the green. If you are a long hitter the most direct way is to drive straight down the middle and for your second to play a long, high belt with a spoon, over the spinney and on to the short space of open fairway in front of the green. But if you have any doubts at all about your ability to get the length it is safer to drive out to the right and play the hole soberly as a dog leg. It is a peculiarly wild, deserted sort of spot, and corresponds to that hole, found on every links, at which one seems to be miles away from the clubhouse, the rest of the course, and every other human being.

MARRIAGE ACROSS BOUNDARY

American Citizen And Canadian Girl

ONE MEANS OF OBTAINING "PREFERRED STATUS"

Glen Falls, N.Y. — Marriage across the international boundary lines was the strange ceremony performed at Highgate Springs, Vermont, when Johnny Graveline of Glen Falls, N.Y. married a Canadian girl from Verdun, Quebec, whose name is not disclosed.

After the ceremony the couple leaned over the line and embraced, being very careful that their feet kept within their own countries. Then they returned to their separate homes in Canada and the United States.

The international ceremony was performed because the American immigration authorities refused the Canadian girl permission to enter the United States.

Now that she is married to Mr. Graveline she has "preferred status" as an immigrant and will find fewer difficulties in the way of her admission.—Reuter.

FIGHT WITH SHARK AT PENZANCE

Harpooned, But Got Free Again

Penzance.

A shark retired hurt with honours even after a tussle with residents of Penzance recently.

Of all the plans for a capture, one seaman's was the best—he went off to fetch a harpoon he had at his home.

The shark went below for a mackerel, and when later he came to the surface for a cruise round—just in case anyone should fall in—his would-be captors were ready.

The seaman launched his harpoon, hit his mark, and off went the shark across the dock, madly slashing the surface with his tail. He was being hauled back by a score of spectators attached to the harpoon rope, when the harpoon came away and his opponents made an unqualified collapse.

"It's all right," I said as I joined him. "It's your hole," I played at. "Bees doing a bit of free jellying."

"In my surprise he shook his head. 'I've played seven,' he said proudly. 'My third was better—right under the back. And I took two to get out.'"

In the end we halted in an innumerable eight. As we were walking in the park the Bill stopped.

We were caddyfing for ourselves. Why I can't remember, but I know we were alone. It was Bill's honour, and I was watching him stoop down and tee his ball, and wondering whether I could risk the straight path to the hole, when suddenly he straightened up and said: "It's my honour, isn't it?"

"Of course," I said in some surprise, "from the last."

"Well, then, pick your ball up, O'man," said Bill rather irritably, "I can see it out of the corner of my eye."

I looked at him in astonishment, and was about to point out that I had never teed my ball when he glanced down at the tee again and saw for himself that it was occupied solely by his own. A look of surprise came over his face.

"That's odd," he said with a puzzled frown; "sorry, I could have sworn I could see another ball on the tee out of the corner of my eye, as I put mine on the peg. Over there—towards the tee box."

"Go on," I said cheerfully, "you're seeing them. You can't start that sort of thing in the middle of the morning. Get on and drive."

Characteristically, Bill went for the safe, dog-legged route, and hit quite a nice one well away to the right. Equally characteristically I decided to chance my arm at the direct way, and, for a wonder, hit a real pip straight towards the spinney. The point, I want to make clear is that, doing it the two ways, we were nearly a hundred yards apart when we played our second. I watched Bill play his, and thought he seemed to fiddle about for a good deal longer than usual, as though not altogether comfortable. But he seemed to hit the ball cleanly enough and, picking up his club, followed his ball round to the right of the spinney and out of sight. Meanwhile I had taken my spoon, and trying probably for a bit too much length saw the ball go off quite well, but with that nasty sensation that it had not been hit quite in the middle of the club. If I knew anything of that course it would have finished in the last ten yards of the trees, which was liable to be fatal. To cut a long story short, when some minutes later, I at length came in sight of the green and backed my ball on to it, I had played six, and there was Bill's ball reappearing peacefully three feet from the hole.

"It's all right," I said as I joined him. "It's your hole," I played at. "Bees doing a bit of free jellying."

"In my surprise he shook his head. 'I've played seven,' he said proudly. 'My third was better—right under the back. And I took two to get out.'"

EXHIBITION OF CHINESE ART

VISIT BY ROYAL PARTY

GREAT INTEREST SHOWN

London, To-day.—Their Majesties, the King and Queen and the royal party, which included the Duchess of Kent, the Princess Marie Louise, the Princess Helena Victoria and Lady Patricia Ramsay, spent nearly half an hour walking round the galleries at the Chinese Art Exhibition yesterday, admiring the exhibits. They were received by Sir William Llewellyn, President of the Royal Academy, and Dr. F. T. Cheng.

Lord Lytton and Sir Percival David accompanied the party and explained many of the exhibits. Their Majesties were interested in how the fragile objects were conveyed safely from China. Sir Percival David explained that special boxes were made at Shanghai. The Queen asked to see the boxes, which their Majesties and the Duchess of Kent examined with interest.

Their Majesties several times admiringly commented on the arrangement of the exhibits and the appearance of the galleries. The Queen also expressed admiration for the way in which the pieces she had lent from her own collection were displayed.

A big crowd in Piccadilly cheered their Majesties as they drove back to Buckingham Palace.—Reuter.

CURRENCIES IN KWANGTUNG

Foreign Banks And Paper Money

Canton, To-day.—The repeated verbiage reports stating that the Shamen banks have been requested to surrender their silver coins to the Kwangtung Provincial Bank and to use its notes as legal tender are without foundation.

The foreign banks in Shamen, with the exception of the Bank of Taiwan, do not hold any silver coins but deal exclusively in Hong Kong currency. It is out of question for these foreign banks to use Chinese paper money, which has no international exchange value.

Since there is no departure from the existing banking practice, the report that the Consular body in Shamen met recently to discuss the surrender of silver to the Provincial Government is also without foundation.—Union News.

PRIVATE SENTENCED TO 28 DAYS DETENTION

Private Cottingham, of the East Lancashire Regiment, who was court-martialled on November 25 on a charge of striking a superior officer in the execution of his duties, has been found guilty by the court and sentenced to 28 days' detention.

During the week ended November 23 Calcutta and Bengalk reported 35 and 15 cases of cholera, respectively, while, in addition to the one case reported from Hong Kong, Bombay had five cases of smallpox and Calcutta two.

INFRINGEMENT OF TRADE-MARK

Defendants Ordered To Pay $25 Fine

PLEA FOR LENIENCY IN FAMILY MATTER

The case in which the United States Drug Store took proceedings against the Sino-German Dispensary for alleged infringement of the Trade Marks Ordinance, was concluded before the Full Court of Appeal comprising His Honour the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl MacGregor, and the Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice R. E. Lindell, in the Supreme Court this morning.

Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K. C., and Mr. Hing Shing-ko, instructed by Mr. G. K. Hall Brutton, appeared for the Sino-German Dispensary, while Mr. Eldon, K. C., instructed by the Hon. Mr. M. K. Lo, represented the United States Drug Store.

A "Family Matter"

Mr. Jenkin stated that it was agreed that the matter could not be successfully carried any further and asked their Lordships to take a lenient view of the case. He stated also that it was almost a family matter, as the claimant was his client's nephew. He had discussed the matter with his learned friend Mr. Potter and it was agreed that the respondents should pay the costs of this morning's hearing and also the costs of the police court proceedings in addition to a fine of $25, which he understood was customary.

His clients undertook to change the labels on the goods which were the subject of the proceedings. He submitted that that would meet the case entirely. Mr. Potter said that he supported Mr. Jenkin under the circumstances, and the Chief Justice consequently made an order that the defendants pay a fine of $25 and the costs of the proceedings.

EAST LANCS. DRAW WITH SAPPERS

Clever Tackling.—The East Lancs. forwards attacked strongly, but were met with clever tackling by Hurst and Boyling, and the ball was taken into their own half.

After clever inter-passing by Howlett and Cragg, the Sappers left wing, Dwyer, at centre-forward, received the ball and pointed over the head of Williams, the East Lancs. custodian, who ran out to meet him for the first goal. After a strong attack by the East Lancs. centre broke away to equalise, the ball glancing off the upright into the net.

WHAT WILL BECOME OF HO KAR KEUNG?

when the Kowloon forwards were seen in some dazzling movements.

Why This Selfishness

But like most tales with a good beginning, the ending was very poor and the first line of attack cracked up badly. Oppenheim being the main offender. Playing a selfish game, he refused to part with the ball until it was invariably too late, while G. White was not much better.

It is about time that the Kowloon inside-forwards realised that in D. Knox they have one of the best left wingers in the Colony. With everything in his favour, Knox was, however, starved throughout, much to the disgust of all Kowloon supporters. This blunder should be rectified before it is too late.

Boyes, the main team's custodian, was again the shining light of the team and if he keeps up his present run of brilliant displays, he will no doubt eventually find himself in one of the Interport trial sides.

Wheeler and Keatings performed yeoman service in the Fushier defence, especially the latter.

ATHLETIC JUNIORS TROUNCED

From this goal the Navy took control of the game and Gould, Shaw and Austrie added further goals before the Athletic replied. The Chinese reduced the deficit a few seconds before half-time, when a spirited breakaway led to Chan Yui-chung placing the ball in front of goal for Cheung Moon-wing to net.

Fine Goal

The Navy continued their aggression immediately on resuming, and increased their lead within the first half-minute of play, when Austrie converted a fine centre from Tuffen.

Ten minutes later the Athletic again broke away and Cheung Moon-wing received from a goal-mouth melee to score his second.

SOUTH CHINA "B" VERY NEARLY DEFEATED

Eventually Ng Po-kui scored the winning goal from an almost impossible angle. There was only one team in the game after that and much good work was seen on the right-wing, where Lee Shek-yau caused Eastman and Boyd a great deal of trouble.

Bliss played a praiseworthy game in the pivot position, as well as Boyd and G. White, on his left and right, respectively.

Kowloon v Army.—Boyes, Everest and Eastman, G. White, Bliss and Boyd; W. Knox, V. White, D. Knox, Oppenheim and Hamball.

South China "B" v. Pan Ka-ping; Lee Kwan and Ye Ming-yuen; H. Yung, Lam Tak-po and Yan Wah-hung; Lee Shek-yau, Cheuk Shek-lan, Ho Ka-keung, Ng Po-kui and Ip Yung-po.

impressive.

With The Juniors

Although the Club juniors knocked up 153 against the Navy, that total proved inadequate as the sailors were in good batting form and almost every man made some runs. A feature of the Club innings was the last wicket stand by G. A. Stewart and W. Wooding, who put on 58 runs in very quick time.

It would have done some of the senior teams a lot of good to have seen the way in which both the Club and Navy sides went for the runs. It was definitely one of the brightest league matches seen on the Club ground for many a day. The Police failed badly against the Engineers and were beaten by 122 runs. They have a very weak side this season, and if the L.C.P. (Mr. T. H. King) would turn out for them in the league matches, as he used to do in previous seasons, he would strengthen both their batting and bowling considerably.

The Recreation Ground match was postponed on account of the sodden state of the Recreation ground. It is not yet known when they will play off the fixture.

Sui Tin-lin displayed a safe pair of hands, but he was very slow, and had the Navy forwards charged him often they might have scored. The Navy realised Sui's weakness during the last ten minutes of the game, when they commenced lobbing the ball into the goalmouth and then following up, but it was too late and no goals resulted.

Mak Sui Hon Shines

Mak Sui-hon was very reliable, and he concentrated on holding Jones, the most dangerous player in the Navy attack. The Athletic opened the scoring after three minutes play, Chan Man-chi scoring from close range. In the next moment the Navy had had luck, when Cannell ran through and placed the ball in front of goal for Jones to send in a terrific shot. Sui, however, dived and managed to push the ball out to Jones, but he unfortunately hit the upright with a good shot for Mak Sui-hon to clear from the rebound.

Yeung Kam-po had had luck in the next few minutes when he tested Roberts from about four yards with a fine angle shot. Roberts gathering to clear well down field.

The Equaliser

The Navy equalised after 20 minutes play, when Baxter ran down the wing, drew the defence, and passed across for Jones to score with a fine shot.

Thirty seconds later Jones crashed into To Wai-kuen and had to leave the field with a nasty cut under the eye, and, during his absence, the Athletic ran through, Yeung Kam-po receiving from Au Ping-ming to beat Roberts with a fine "daisy-cutter."

The game continued to be of ding-dong nature, but no further goals resulted. Navy: Roberts, Stallard, Crawford, Clarkson, Bowers, Wallace, Baxter, Smith, Cannell, Jones and Wearmouth. Athletic: Sui Tin-lin, Mak Sui-hon, Fu Kar-ling, Ho Cho-yin, Lai Kwok-chut, Lo Wai-keun, Tang Kwong-sum, Yeung Kam-po, Au Ping-ming, Chan Man-chi and Wang Chai-man.

WEATHER REPORT

A strong anticyclone has developed quickly over China. The depression has moved north-eastward to the South of Hokkaido. North-west winds, fresh, cloudy, was the forecasting.

Trip To Begin Next January

Nanking, To-day.—After repeated delays, Mr. Cheng Yuan, the Government envoy who is to escort the Panchen Lama on his homeward journey to Tibet, left here for Chinghai yesterday afternoon by the Tientsin-Pukow Railway. Interviewed prior to his departure, Mr. Cheng declared that the Panchen Lama will probably start his trip in next January. But should the weather be cold, the Living Buddha might postpone his departure until a later date.—Central News Agency.

For to-day, as forecasted by the Royal Observatory, the weather will be fresh, cloudy, was the forecasting.

FLOODS IN KIANGSUMiserable Plight Of Victims*IMMEDIATE RELIEF WANTED

Hsuehchow, Saturday.
 A pathetic appeal for the immediate relief of 30,000 refugees in Pihshien, the worst-hit district in North Kiangsu during the recent flood catastrophe, was made to-day in a telegram addressed by the Pihshien Magistrate to the office of the Special Administrator for the Hsuehchow area.

The telegram states that the majority of the flood victims are living in miserable conditions. The farmers in the remote districts might become bandits and upset law and order there, the wire continues.

The message suggests that the office should appropriate adequate funds for the immediate relief of the afflicted people. It also urges the Central Government to close the gap along the Hwangho embankment at Tsinchwang, in West Shantung, as soon as possible.—Central News Agency.

ADAMSON'S FISHING EXCURSIONMajor Cole's Third Shot

"Look here," he said suddenly, "I can't understand what's the matter with me. I keep seeing that damned other ball."

"What, now?"

"No. But all the way up that hole until we got to the green. I saw it at my second shot and at my third. And my fourth. Every time I addressed the ball I could see the damned thing out of the corner of my eye. And when I looked there wasn't anything."

"There was a moment's pause, 'I expect you've got a bit of a liver,' I said comfortingly. 'I often get spots and lights and things that I can see out of the corner of my eye when I get one. Come on.'"

I led the way to the next tee. Bill followed, but he shook his head doubtfully, and I could see that he was not convinced. He played badly for the rest of the round, and I won by two and one.

And though he saw no more of the mysterious ball he confessed that it was worrying him, and that he found it difficult to concentrate.

We did not play the bye hole, but walked straight into the clubhouse for a drink. There was no one about (it being a week-day morning), and we had the place entirely to ourselves. While we were enjoying that prime object of the game of golf—the quiet after-the-round drink and smoke—old Captain Adams, the secretary, came in. He's a nice old boy who has been secretary of the club for over twenty years, and is very much an institution at the Royal North Link.

"Hallo, Captain," said Bill, "come and join us. What is it—whisky?"

"Thank you very much," said the old boy, and he sat down and lit his pipe. "Well," he said after a bit, "have you been out?"

"We told him we had."

"And who won to-day? Mr. Carter? It was his turn."

"Well, as a matter of fact," I said, "I won—out of turn. But it was hardly fair. I was assisted by the local ghost."

"Ghost?" said Adams quickly. "Tut. Bill kept seeing another ball out of the corner of his eye, as well as his own, and couldn't make up his mind which to hit."

To our surprise Adams did not laugh. He merely put down his drink and nodded slowly.

"That will have been on the fifteenth, I suppose?" he said, quietly. We started at the old man.

"Yes," said Bill. "It was. On the fifteenth. But how...?"

The old man shook his head. "You're not the first," he said, "and I don't suppose you'll be the last."

"If you mean to say—other people see this ball?" I said, quickly, "that it's really there?"

Adams turned his old grey eyes towards me. "I don't know what you mean by 'really' there," he said, calmly, "but plenty of other people have seen a ball besides their own there. It's Major Cole's ball."

"And who's Major Cole?" asked Bill, "or who was he?"

"A member of the 'Club,'" said the secretary, rather wearily. He looked from one of us to the other.

"Do you want to hear about him?" I asked, "or about that ball?"

"I want to know about that ball," said Bill, firmly.

The Captain sighed. "All right," he said, picking up his glass and drinking it gently. "Well, Major Cole was, I say, a member of this 'Club.' It's a long time ago now, and after the war—and I don't think he had ever been a regular. He was one of those people who'd been a major in the war and stuck to his rank afterwards. Anyhow, he came to live about here, and he joined the club. He was quite a good player—particularly for a man who must have been getting on. And he was one of those players..." he paused, "one of those players who is rather a problem to the handicapping committee. Officially, he played off six. But there were quite a lot of people who felt that—that if he'd put in a few genuine cards that would have been about six strokes too many."

"Like—," said Bill, grimly.

The Captain shook his head with a smile. "Officially," he said, "I know nothing of Mr. Cole except that he regularly returns cards which entitle him to a handicap of ten. But to return to the Major—nobody knew much about him, or quite what he lived on. But he certainly played a lot of golf, and with new members particularly, he liked to play for rather a lot of money. The older members," he added, noncommittally, "rather fought shy of him."

We nodded comprehendingly. "That was the position," the Captain went on. "In 1919 Major Cole played a great deal over the course. His handicap remained at six, and he continued to play for quite sizable sums, and usually to win. In fact, the more sizable the sum the more certainly he won. Sometimes he lost, but that would be when he was playing for a pound or so."

"Why wasn't he kicked out?" asked Bill bluntly.

The Captain shook his head. "It was considered," he replied, "but there were difficulties. Officially there was nothing against him. There is no rule against betting on a game. If people chose to play with him it was their business."

Major Cole's Third Shot

He applied a match to his pipe. "But in the summer of '19," he went on, "a young fellow named Bates joined the club. He was a silly young ass with far more money than sense. I think his father had been beer. Anyhow, Bates was a very rich young man. Moreover, he had a lot of illusions about his golf. He wasn't a bad player in a slashing, long-hitting, unreliable sort of way, but at eight he was, if anything, rather handicapped. Any man who kept straight and steady ought to have beaten him, except—and note this—on a very occasional day when all his slashes were coming off. Like most of the type, he had his occasional good days, and then he was very good indeed." The old man paused and shook his head.

"Well, of course, Bates and the Major became fast friends. One might almost say they were made for one another. They used to play together a lot. Sometimes one would win and sometimes the other. But there was an odd feature about it. One night I heard young Bates telling a crowd in here that he had taken twenty pounds off the Major that day. Now, one didn't win twenty pounds off Major Cole, and I wasn't a bit surprised to learn that the next day they proposed to play a really big match. Of course, it seemed clear enough. The major was after something bigger than usual, and the twenty pounds was an unusually large sum to catch an unusually large mackerel.

"Well, the next day out they went, and it was from their cadences that I heard the story of that match. According to Bates, there was a hundred pounds on it, and they were playing level. But the main point seems to have been that by a ghastly bit of luck the Major seems to have struck one of Bates's few good days. Whether it was the stake or all the practice he'd been having nobody will ever know. But the fact remains that Bates did the first nine holes in thirty-eight, which, as you know, is one over par. The poor old Major did his best, and he was only one down at the turn. But Bates had got his tail right up, and he went on getting par figures until at the fifteenth he was two up. There, for the first time, he faltered. He hit a big drive, but it was badly pulled. And the Major, a match player if ever there was one, played away to the right for safety, and they parted."

"The secretary paused and took a sip at his drink. "Well, now comes the nasty part. Bates saw the Major play his second and disappear behind the trees. He put his own second slap into the spinnery and had a hell of a job to find it, and when he arrived on the green, having played five, the Major was two feet from the hole in four and won the hole. That was down to one. Bates was a bit shaken, and the end of it was that the Major figured at the next hole won the seventeenth and halved the last hole for the match."

"Well, I'm damned!" said Bill. "That night," he said quietly, "the caddy master came to me and told me that one of his boys had said that the Major had put his second in a bunker, that while out of sight he had picked out of the box-

Jupiter

Jupiter, the giant planet, is an easy object in any telescope. Its dark belts and the four largest of its nine moons are one of the show pieces of the sky.

The movements of these satellites round Jupiter are of never-failing interest, as they change their positions rapidly from hour to hour. They can also be detected passing in front of the planet and being eclipsed as they move into Jupiter's shadow.

The "surface" of the planet (though it is possibly only a cloudy formation which we see, and not the actual surface of the globe) shows many spots, and by watching these spots for a little while the rotation of Jupiter on its axis is easily discerned. It rotates in the short period of 9 hours 55 minutes, which is very much shorter than the earth's (nearly) 24 hours.

Ringed Saturn

Saturn, still farther away, while presenting no detail has its marvellous system of rings to show—in itself well repaying the cost of a telescope. Observation of Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto needs a large telescope, but there are many other objects within reach of the small instrument.

You can see beautiful pairs of stars, of different colours, called "double stars"; some of the nebulae which are enormous clouds of luminous gas of a size beyond conception; swarms of stars all close together, forming loose and globular clusters; stars whose light varies from day to day called "variable stars."

All these wonderful sights of

LEPER COLONY IN WEIYANG

Unfortunates Almost Self-Supporting

Weiyang District, Saturday. There are over 300 children, men and women lepers in the special area which is exclusive to the lepers of the district.

These unfortunate outcasts do not depend entirely on charity, for they are earning their own livelihood. Some earn their food by fishing in the nearby river; others weave baskets; and those who are by heritage lepers and also from wealthy families, do not work but go about the town and mix with other healthy people.—Neutral News.

the sky are "there for" the looking at" by anyone possessing even a small telescope.

Endless Interest

Apart from the actual observing with a telescope, there are other interesting opportunities for the amateur astronomer. The constellations and their relative positions must be learned, also the names of the brighter stars, so that the sky becomes a familiar picture. The motions of the planets against the starry background can then be easily detected, and their changing positions at once apparent.

The flight of meteors can be studied, and here again information can be gained which is of value to the science.

The beauty of astronomy is that its study is endless and therefore never palls—as do many other hobbies. If you feel you need a new interest in life—something which will give the mind a complete change from mundane matters—take up astronomy. You will never regret it.
